Mr. De Valera in his speech said it was a lie that the Irish people would by a majerity accept the treaty. In added that although the meeting had been advertised for only three days, thousands of rerused for only three days, thousands of persons had assembled in support of the republic proclaimed during "Faster week," and which was ratified at the Irish elections. The London agreement was not a treaty but an instrument which in every line denied Irish sovereignty. It was signed under durers and was no more binding than the infamous act of union.

Mr. De Valera said the articles of the agreement bound the Irish people to exchange their republic for a monarchy. He asked if the people wanted as their monarch "King George of England," to which there were replies of "No. no." The king would be embodied in the Irish constitution and be really the authority of Premier Lioyd George and his cabinet.
